Zagreb, 21st November 2011

Esteemed colleagues,

On the occasion of the forthcoming inauguration of new permanent exhibition of your museum, due on 8th December 2011, I would like to congratulate you on behalf of my staff and myself.

Preparing and opening a permanent exhibition is a major event for every museum. It is a culmination of individual and team effort of extraordinary proportions, a result of years of study and planning. It is a fruitful result of science combined with imagination and creativity.

Museum Europäischer Kulturen is an outstanding institution greatly respected among colleagues throughout Europe for its excellence and innovation. We were honoured for having the opportunity to collaborate in few projects, first of which was our visiting exhibition „Croatian Music and Identities“ in 2006, which was accompanied with extensive programs. Excellent collaboration continued with project „Entrepreneurial Cultures in European Cities“ (2008 – 2010), financed from EU funds, which included five other institutions from different European cities. I am glad that our two museums plan to continue collaboration by exchanging exhibitions and experts, and by engaging in joint research projects.

We wish you a successful inauguration of exhibition that will be a landmark among European ethnological museums, attempting to understand and interpret our common heritage.

Director
